Human relations board

The bird who talked to a town

ALBANY — Sam was a rare bird — one of those community benefactor types you hear about but seldom see. His associate, Van Bierbaumer, believes Sam's greatest contribution to municipal morale was his wolf whistle — a low, hoarse hoot of unabashed admiration. "That whistle," Van said yesterday, "turned the head of every woman who inspired it. Females ranging from teenagers to dowagers have told me it made their day."

Sam didn't spend all of his time in idle flirtations, however. As Van's "partner" in the De Monette Dog Salon, at Petland, he had responsibilities. Van handles the business end. Sam was the receptionist.

"Everybody came in to talk to Sam," Van mused. "Kids and adults. It kept him busy. But, being a born exhibitionist and an accomplished conversationalist, he was happy in his work. Sam never ran down."

During an afternoon-lull Sam was not above talking to himself, and he was a very appreciative audience. In the monologue role, he'd make a couple of remarks and then laugh his head off. When talking to others he was equally eager to entertain. Usually he'd open the conversation with a large "Hello — how are you?" and then blurt out whatever was on his mind. If that play didn't get a laugh, he'd pull a phony cough or sneeze to get the conversation moving.

"Being a Greater Indian Hill Mynah bird — they're quite rare — he could imitate anything," Partner Bierbaumer said. "His conversational range was amazing, and his enunciation clear and distinct. The only thing that stumped us was his calling for 'Karen.' We never did find out who Karen was. Sam was an enigmatic bird."

Another oddity popped up last Thursday. Sam coughed mightily, when no one was around to appreciate it. When the hacking continued, Van examined the receptionist, but found nothing wrong, and assumed Sam might be rehearsing his act. So Sam continued on duty at the shop, but the cough persisted.

Friday morning Van found his small partner, a ruffled heap of feathers, lying beneath his perch. Sam was dead.

Being an immigrant, he left no known survivors in this country. But hundreds of people — school kids, shoppers, business associates — who were accustomed to stopping by for a word with the feathered philosopher, will mourn his passing.

Sam was that kind of

Commission will function independently

By NORMAN COLBY
I-G Staff Writer

ALBANY — A Human Relations Commission, with power to conduct investigations and call witnesses including city department heads, independent of the city council, will soon be functioning.

Created by the Albany City Council Monday night, the Commission will investigate "human relations violations" but will also have the positive role of proposing human relations programs.

The vote was 3-1, with dissenting Councilman Lewis Howell commenting after the meeting that the new group will be "divisive" in the community.

Howell said the HRC is one of many programs initiated for, "questionable reasons... always by the same group of people."

Mayor Jackson later commented that she expects a wide range of Albany residents to become members of the HRC since she has received many calls and letters from people expressing interest. She emphasized the "positive" role of the new group.

Vice Mayor Pat Griffin, who has championed the HRC throughout earlier discussions, made the motion creating the commission, seconded by Councilman Robert Luoma who has held committee discussions with Griffin on the topic.

Councilman Mike Gleason was absent.

City Administrator James Turner asked Griffin if newspaper reports quoting Griffin as saying the HRC would resemble a "grand jury" were correct.

Griffin replied that he favors the HRC following the example the City of San (Turn to Page 2, Col. 6)

Job plan to benefit 'Seniors'

ALBANY — Senior citizens will be the main beneficiaries of a six-month, government-financed jobs program in Albany, costing up to $250,000.

"Round 1" of the program unanimously adopted by the council Monday night calls for a survey of the seniors' needs, then provision for seniors' feeding, transportation to shopping, doctor's appointments and other services.

The transportation could make possible the seniors' attendance at church on Sundays and local council meetings on Mondays, official speculated.

Best of all, the council indicated, many people hired to provide the survey and services for seniors will also be senior citizens, usually those who have been forced to retire.

The council was assured (Turn to Page 2, Col. 6)

"Aid to veterans — especially those in veterans' hospitals, and aid to their families has been one of our principal projects. For many years our service officer, C. Eddie Johnson, has assisted veterans and widows to establish V.A. claims."

"We've also have an active USO committee which works with youths baseball and bowling teams, and assists in Boys' State programs. Fund drives have occupied a major part of the committee's civic efforts."

"And, in Legion tradition, we've worked hard to further patriotism in our

Police said it was undetermined how the burglar gained entrance theorizing that it could have been with a key or a picking device.

Bay Area walkathons may attract 15,000 entrants

ALBANY — Seven March of Dimes Walkathons covering the Bay Area will take place Saturday, April 2, with a goal of 15,000 walkers raising $250,000.

Billed as the KFRC 610 Superwalk, the walkathon will have three starting points in the East Bay at Laney College in Oakland, College of Alameda in Alameda, and Diablo Valley College in Pleasant Hill.

Other walks will start in San Francisco at Kezar Stadium, Red Morton Community Center in Redwood City, Fairfield High School, and Vacaville High School.

National Guard units will man all the Walks, setting up checkpoints and providing transportation for walkers who "poop out."

Other participating groups are the Podiatry Association, radio clubs, Civil Air Patrol, local law enforcement groups, the Red Cross, and others.

Coca Cola and McDonald's will provide refreshments.

Many prizes will be offered walkers, in drawings and those who raise the most money. They include 19-inch TV set from Matthews, Giants and Golden Gator tennis tickets, weekend for two in Mexico City, stationary weekend 'cruise' for two on the Queen Mary, San Francisco weekends at the Jack Tar Hotel, Holiday Inn, Travel Lodge, Hyatt at Union Square, Ramada Inn, Flyers from Fidelity Savings, and two harbor cruises.

Starting 8 to 9 a.m. at Laney College in Oakland, the 20 mile route will visit six parks in Albany, Berkeley, Piedmont, and Oakland. The Alameda Walk will wind through Alameda, proceeding along the beach before returning to the starting point at College of Alameda.

Youth group in symphony performance

ALBANY — "A number of student musicians from the Albany area are expected to play in the Young People's Symphony Orchestra, when the group presents its third concert of the 41st season Sunday." Amelie Holstrom, public relations director, announced yesterday.

"The orchestra, the second oldest continuous youth orchestra in the United States, will give the concert in the Oakland Auditorium Theater, at 10th and Fallon Streets. Curtain time is 4 p.m.," she added.

SFSU staging La Traviata

SAN FRANCISCO — Giuseppe Verdi's "La Traviata" still hailed as the world's most popular opera of all time, relives its scandalous past on the McKenna Theatre stage of San Francisco State University on March 19, 22, 24 and 26 at 8 p.m.

"La Traviata, presented jointly by the Departments of Music and Theatre Arts, is based on the classic play, "Lady of the Camellias," by Alexandre Dumas.

JOBS

by Laura Landy, planning coordinator for the Associated Community Action Program, that $75,000 is assured for "Round 1", with the federal government paying the bill.

But Ms. Landy told the I-G that "Round 2", including home repair service for senior citizens and public works under a "job corps," may not receive the full $175,000 funding. "Round 2" priorities were also adopted by the council.

The final "Round 2" figure may vary from $100,000 to $150,000, she said.

The city's priorities will be submitted to the county and then ACAP, where adoption is expected with little revision.

Audience reaction to the jobs program was varied, with one speaker reminding the council that seniors already receive special public transportation rates adding that "trips to the beautician" may be going too far.

Another speaker, a 70-year-old woman, told the council that, "I can help myself." But Mayor Joyced Jackson replied that, "there seems to be quite a need."

The Albany Committee for the Aging was one of the most active groups in helping a special committee set the priorities.

Vice Mayor Pat Griffin, who made the motions for the council's unanimous adoption of the priorities, emphasized that there are criteria which any Albany resident must meet before being hired for the six-month period.

The person must be a member of a low-income family, and in addition must either be receiving unemployment compensation, be ineligible for unemployment compensation and unemployed for at least 15 weeks, receiving welfare or having exhausted unemployment compensation.

Griffin urged a strong recruiting program among Albany residents, including notification of high school seniors that they must get on the unemployment rolls to gain eligibility for selection.

Times Hometown news

An American Field Service (AFS) "Hamm Egg Breakfast" will provide a lot of mileage for Albany High students, if Peggy Thomsen's forecast materializes.

"We're serving the breakfast March 27, in the Cornell School Cafeteria, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.," Peggy said. "Donations are $1.50 and children under six are admitted free."

"The proceeds will be used to send Albany High students abroad and to bring students from other countries to Albany. It also will finance, hope, an exchange between AHS students and native Americans living on reservations in Southwest. Several East Bay students will present at the fund-raiser to discuss their experiences in foreign countries," she added.

Darlene and Clyde Shumway are chairman of the project, and Albany High and Middle School students will serve as hosts and hostesses.

A former Albany High School grapple, Tyrone Rose, has squared the only blemish on his Diablo Valley College record, enroute to the state 134-pound title.

Prior to the March 5 state tourney in Sacramento, Rose's DVC record had been scarred by a controversial overtime loss to Frank Thomas of Santa Ana.

Rose avenged the setback by defeating Thomas 9-2 in the semifinals before recording his 7-3 championship victory over Mark Needham of Chabot. Which is one case of pride coming after a fall.

City Clerk Patricia Dempster again is warning voters that the last day for registration for the April 19 election is Monday.

"You should register to vote if you have moved, failed to vote in the last general election, or are a newcomer to the state," she added.

Voters may register at the office of the city clerk, 1000 San Pablo Ave., between 8:30 and 5 p.m., and at the fire station behind the city hall on Saturdays and Sundays.

Jerry A. Williams, was in the nation's capital last weekend as an envoy of Albany VFW Post 7636, for the Mid-Winter Conference of the organizations national officers and state commanders.

As a member of the legislative committee, Williams attended briefings by Congressional, administrative and military officials, and noted that "discussions grew heated on the matter of the pardon for draft evaders — a measure opposed by the Veterans."

The junior confirmation class will meet this afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30. A potluck supper at 6:30 this evening will precede the Lenten Bible Study hour. Brother Adam, of the Order of the Holy Cross, will conduct the study session, which will conclude with a service of Communion.

The Senior Choir will meet for rehearsal on Thursday evening, March 17, at 7:30.

Robert Walden, seminarian, will read Morning Prayer at 7 o'clock every morning during Lent with the exception of Wednesdays and Sundays.

A Quiet Day will take place as part of the Lenten observance on Saturday, March 19, from 10-3. Sister Jean, of the Order of St. Francis, will lead it. James Lamy, junior warden, will direct the March Junior Warden's Work Day, also on Saturday, when volunteers will work on the buildings and grounds.

"The Prodigal Son in Us" will be the topic of Father Debenham's sermon on the Fourth Sunday in Lent, March 20. He will preach at both services, 8 a.m. and 10 a.m., and will also be the celebrant of Holy Communion. He will be assisted by the Rev. Francis Symons, deacon, and Nabeel Jacob, lay reader. The Old Testament lesson will be read by Shirley Sisco; Andy Lamb will serve as acolyte at the early service and Leonard Johnson and Kristy Scott will serve at the later service. Harry Stadium will sing the offertory anthem, "Last! the cherub host," from "The Holy City," by Gaul. John Askins and James Lamb will usher. A coffee hour in the parish hall will follow the 10 o'clock service. The adult discussion group will meet at 9 a.m. in the parish library to continue its exploration of the Proposed Draft Book of Common Prayer, which will be voted on at the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in 1979.

Walter E. Phillips, who retired from the Army chaplaincy in January and will be installed as Pastor. Before his service in the Army, Pastor Phillips had pastored several other Southern Baptist Churches.

The pastor will continue with his series of messages on the "Seven Last Words of Christ" each Sunday evening service through April 3rd. These messages are in preparation for Easter Sunday.

A film also will be shown Sunday evening called "Ocean to Ocean" and will concern itself with Southern Baptist Home Missions.

REMODELED — This kitchen was lengthened by moving the wall dividing the kitchen and pantry area. A separate pantry is maintained because it houses a restaurant size refrigerator-freezer and a large convection oven, both of which are noisy. The kitchen area has a home refrigerator and a large restaurant stove with six burners and griddle. Shaker-style cabinets and furniture in kitchen and pantry tie the kitchen in with the owner's collection of early American furniture. Exposed walls are brick as they are in living and dining rooms. A long marble counter top for bread and pastry-making was built at a low level so that the owner, who is short, can work comfortably.

Y-House sponsors kitchen tour

The kitchens of seven North Berkeley houses will be open Thursday from 10:30 to 3 p.m. for a kitchen tour sponsored by the University YMCA Auxiliary. Five kitchens will feature cooking demonstrations and light refreshments will be served in several of the homes. More than 10 Berkeley area restaurants have donated dinners-for-two for a drawing that will be conducted at one house.

Four of the seven kitchens are remodeled rooms in older houses; in these, walls between pantries and kitchens were moved and removed to give larger rooms. Two kitchens are in new hillside homes. The seventh is an older kitchen which continues to be workable without remodeling.

Food demonstrations are scheduled for the last 15 minutes of each hour. Professionals will show use of food processor, French bread-making, French dessert-making, cake decorating and Chinese cooking.

Wood is used extensively in all seven kitchens. Other features found in several are restaurant-size stoves, track lighting, wood chopping surfaces and marble

A $7.50 tax-deductible donation is requested from those taking the tour.

Clumsy gunman

Bank robbed in Berkeley

The Wells Fargo Bank at 1800 Solano Ave. was robbed of $906 by a well-dressed but clumsy gunman who dropped nine $20 bills in a nearby parking lot in his hasty getaway, police reported.

The man, described as a black male, 5-8, 140 pounds, with a full natural hairdo, clean shaven, and wearing a conservative business suit, entered the bank at 12:53 p.m. yesterday carrying a brief case.

He approached teller Frances Cardoza and handed her a withdrawal slip. She asked him, "Where's the passbook?"

"Don't get smart b---, read it," said the robber nervously.

She read the note, which said, "You better give me all your money in twenty's and hurry or I'll push the buttons on my case and blow everybody in the bank up." Mrs. Cardoza hesitated and the man opened his briefcase and pulled out a revolver, probably a 38-caliber.

"Hurry up b---, I don't have all day," the gunman said.

The teller handed over the money, which he stuffed in his pocket. The man put the gun away and fled through the side door.

The robber got into a car which police said had been stolen in Oakland. He drove it around the corner to a super market and parked in the lot. A passerby later found $180 in $20 bills near the car.

Police said they have no suspects as yet, and the investigation continues.

Daring climbers scale campus heights

By ROBERT KROLL
I-G Staff Writer

On any fine night of the year, that is one without rain, you are likely to see the eerie sight of human forms silhouetted against the night sky, clinging perilously to the faces of University of California buildings.

These are the night climbers of Berkeley.

A longstanding tradition on the campus here, the night climbers, or "builders," as they have been recently dubbed, are following in the time-honored footsteps of their Cambridge, England forebears.

Using the implements of the rock climbers or mountaineer, today's builders scale such university edifices as Eshleman Hall, the Hearst Greek Theater, the Memorial Stadium, and the Low Temperature Laboratory after darkness falls to avoid detection.

They use architectural features of the buildings as if they were geologic fissures, indentations, cracks and "chimneys" (a vertical space between two rock formations).

With their long alpine ropes, alloy carabiners (large, gated links used to anchor their climb for protection), and their knobby rubber soled shoes, the peripatetic night climbers have been conducting their nocturnal adventures for at least 20 years, some oldtimers say.

The night climbers are an independent breed of sports people, mainly students or faculty, who are, for the most part, serious rock climbers practicing the sophisticated techniques of their avocation in the most readily accessible location.

"Indian Rock (a favored rock climbing area in the Berkeley hills) offers only so much variety, (then) you want to try something more difficult," said one builder who asked to remain anonymous. The name builder, incidentally, is a word play on the term "boulderer," referring to people who climb on large granite boulders.

The night climbers are virtually unknown to UC campus police in recent times, a department spokesman said, and the last known report of a night climber was made about five years ago, when the monolithic 307-foot Campanile (Sather) Tower was assaulted. The Campanile climber was asked to dismount forthwith and was released with a reprimand. There are no specific campus rules forbidding the practice, as there were in Cambridge (where the punishment often meant "sending the student home to weeping parents.")

It has been reported that the earliest night climbers rappelled (descent by a rope) down the Campanile, to the horror of campus authorities, who tried unsuccessfully to put a stop to it. In the 1960's one veteran campus patrolman recalls discovering giant red footprints up the side of Stephens Hall. "It looked like the Jolly Green Giant had walked up the side of the building," said Sgt. Richard Fascholz. He said the culprit was never caught.

"Every roof-climber in Cambridge probably started on his errand course in the same way, namely, by climbing into college," states the anonymously written (the author's name is the pseudonym "Whipplesnaith") "The Night Climbers of Cambridge," first published in 1937.

The gates to the Cambridge colleges were locked at 10 p.m., and students were expected to be in their living quarters by that time or beg for admission, a request which was often met with a scolding. The student was likely to be fined a few pence, the amount varying from college to college, for returning after the curfew.

"Thus... many an undergraduate sooner or later finds himself looking for an inconspicuous mode of entry into college," states the "Night Climbers." The inconspicuous mode was, of course, to vault the spiked fence surrounding the college and cavorting silently along cornices, up drainpipes, along rooftops to their rooms.

Berkeley's introduction of night climbing sprung not from a curfew, but rather from the city's preeminence in the field of American mountaineering.

The town was the focal point of the Sierra Club's conservation and expeditionary activities since the 1860's.

Many of the country's most able climbers lived in this area and continued to do so to this day. Some of them must be pretty old.

"There are 16 mountaineering shops in Berkeley, and mountaineering travel agency... this is a major center of climbing activity in this part of the country," said Mike Harding of the Mountain Traders mountaineering shop at 1700 Grove St.

Harding said that the campus buildings present all sorts of interesting technical problems for climbers. Some relatively difficult moves can be practiced repeatedly at levels of only 10 to 15 feet above the ground. Climbers of different ability levels can and do use the campus buildings, particularly the Greek Theatre, the stadium, Wheeler Hall, and others for practice climbs. Most of the climbs, however, are for advanced climbers, and they are dangerous, Harding cautioned.

Some climbers have even adapted the Yosemite "decimal system" for rating the difficulty of various climbs on campus. A "class 5" climb is the designation for an advanced climb.

The Greek Theatre backdrop climb, which involves a "chimney" and a mantle, in the jargon of the sport, is about a 5.7 on a scale of five-point-one to five-point-eleven, according to Galen Rowell, a Berkeley naturalist and eminent American climber, who recently scaled the 50-foot height. Rowell was a member of the 1975 American expedition which made an "unsuccessful" assault on K-2, the world's second highest mountain in the Karakoram region of the Himalayas. The expedition reached the 22,000 foot level before turning back due to a combination of adverse factors making the completion of the climb unadvisable.

The Greek Theatre climb, as with others on campus, does not require ropes for support, but Rowell used them with the assistance of a climbing associate, Michael Loughman, a Berkeley geology doctoral candidate, who "belayed" his climb. Belaying is the climbers' term for gripping the lower end of the rope for protection of a climber above.

Near the top of the 50-foot high column in the theatre is an "I-bolt" into which a climber can tie a tubular nylon "sling" to which he attached a metal carabiner or link. He then laces the rope through the carabiner, forming an "anchor" with the belayer holding the end of the rope.

Loughman speculated that the I-bolt had been placed in the column by one of the early builders.

The builders do not as a general rule implant pitons, metal spikes, in campus buildings for several reasons. The climbers are, for the most part, conservationists whose ideal is to leave no trace of their climb; the pitons are designed for hard granite, not masonry, and would likely not only deface the buildings with large holes, but would not provide the protection for which they are designed. Existing protuberances are relied on heavily for support.

Like the perennial human fly, the chimney climber relies on the friction created by exerting pressure on his feet, with one leg pushing against the back wall while the other pushes against the column or pillar. The hands are used only to maintain balance and to hold the rope.

Demonstrating a climb for the I-G, Rowell, Loughman and his wife Amy, a former staffer in the UC Chancellor's office, reached the top of the theatre in two or three minutes in dense post twilight darkness. Upon mounting the summit, they each quickly rappelled down the outside of the theatre's mammoth concrete backdrop using a rope as a trapeze artist would in dismounting.

Another favorite climb on campus involves the use of a vertical rain trough in the corner of the south face of Boalt Hall. It is climbed by using the "lieback" technique, Rowell, a freelancer who works regularly for National Geographic and is currently completing a Sierra Club-sponsored book on the K-2 expedition, explained.

In this climb, the climber uses the 90-degree angle of the corner to hold onto the trough with his hands, leaning back and walking up the wall in a crouched position. On the Yosemite scale, this is a 5.9 climb, said Rowell.

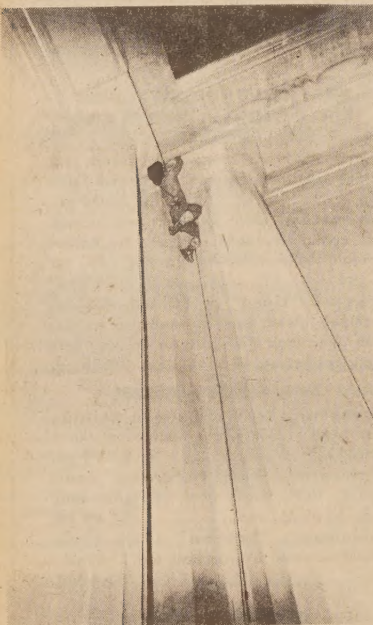

Building is far from institutionalized at the local campus, but it clearly is a widespread and continuing practice for an undetermined number of climbers. It is said that a "Underground Guide to Building at Cal" is being produced by a local aficionado of the sport, though this could not be confirmed.

Campus authorities hope to discourage building on campus simply because of the danger to the participants and the liability of the university in the event of an accident. Local builders might take heart that officials here do not take the matter as seriously as this Cambridge vice-chancellor did:

"Notice by the Vice-Chancellor: Two persons 'in statu pupillari' (students), having been found climbing King's College Chapel, have been rusticated (sent home) by their Colleges. Signed, G. H. A. Wilson, 10 June, 1937."

'Host Families' for teachers are sought

GARDEN GROVE — California families are needed to host English-speaking European teachers as guests in their homes for a seven-to-ten-day period this summer. The program is sponsored today by The American Host Foundation. American Host is one of the few nonprofit, non-governmental programs designed to show the American way of life to foreign visitors by pairing them with American families. It is a nationwide home hospitality program which is endorsed by the Department of State.

Now in its sixteenth year, American Host has opened doors to better understanding for more than ten thousand European teachers who have passed through their new understanding of America to their students, colleagues and friends when they returned to their homelands. Being a Host Family is open to anyone who has the desire to increase understanding and friendship between Europeans and Americans. Host Families are required to provide a private room and meals for their guest and to give their guest the opportunity to meet friends and neighbors and see local sights of interest.

Rumpelstiltskin on stage of SFSU

SAN FRANCISCO — Rumpelstiltskin, the medieval whiz kid who spun straw into gold, makes a guest appearance in our century in Crumple, Rumpelstiltskin in San Francisco State University's Arena Theatre March 19 and 20. Bo Westerfield directs this classic children's tale about a wily packrat of a troll and the riddle surrounding his name. Performances are at noon and 2 p.m.

1,000 jobs are available in 'Forestry'

SACRAMENTO — Almost 1,000 jobs are available this summer for young persons who want to work outdoors for the California Department of Forestry.

According to Lewis Moran, director of the department, anyone 16 through 22 can apply for the jobs which will pay $2.50 an hour.

"This is a new fire prevention program," says Moran, "and one that's going to improve our fire defenses in the wildlands. And everyone's going to earn their pay because we have a lot of work to do if we're going to keep fires down in this drought year."

Moran says the work will include cutting fire breaks, reducing roadside fire hazards, and providing support services to wildland fire crews. However, he says young persons will not actually fight fires but will patrol them once fires are brought under control.

The program is funded by a $4.7 million federal grant secured by the state Employment Development Department.

Are you a candidate for a heart attack?

Are you a candidate for a heart attack?

Do you smoke cigarettes? Are you overweight? Do you work under pressure and get little exercise? If you have high blood pressure (over 23 million Americans do), do you tend to disregard your doctor's advice?

If your answer to any of these questions is "yes," the Alameda County Heart Association says you are statistically at a higher risk for heart attack than those who can say "no."

Cigarette smoking, for instance, even if it's just one pack a day, markedly increases heart attack risk by dumping carbon monoxide into the blood stream and robbing the heart muscle of vital oxygen. If you are overweight, your heart has to work that much harder to pump blood throughout the body. You may also have high blood levels of fats and cholesterol which contribute to atherosclerosis or hardening of the arteries.

Emotional pressure may also over-tax your heart. And lack of regular exercise (endurance types are best) keep your heart from working at its maximum efficiency. If you have high blood pressure and it's being adequately controlled by your doctor, fine. But if you're "cheating" on the medication you're supposed to be taking, or on that special diet your doctor has prescribed, you may be in for trouble.

Even if you can answer "no" to some or all of the questions posed here, you should be constantly on the lookout for the signals of heart attack. Last year, more than 350,000 Americans died of heart attack before ever reaching a hospital. Many of these people could possibly have been saved if they had sought medical help promptly at the onset of the warning signs of heart attack.

The most frequent location of heart attack pain is the center of the chest, immediately behind the breastbone. In contrast, pain in the region of the left breast is usually quite harmless and is generally not due to the heart.

The next most frequent spot is the inside of the left arm. Pain may also occur in the neck, jaws upper abdomen or back, right arm or shoulder, either alone or in company with pain in the central chest area or arms.

What you may feel in the chest is a sensation of pressure, fullness, queezing or pain. This may be accompanied by sweating, shortness of breath, nausea or vomiting. You may mistake these symptoms for indigestion. But don't be fooled.

If you experience any of these signs, call your local fire department rescue squad immediately or get to a nearby hospital at once! Time is critical, so don't delay!

Ikebana slates spring festival

The flower festival of Hana Matsuri will celebrate Buddha's birth when the Bay Area Chapter of Ikebana International stages its biennial spring show Saturday, March 19, and Sunday, March 20, at the Hall of Flowers in Golden Gate Park. Among the ethnic features will be displays of ikebana, bonsai plants, bonseki, and suiseki.

Members from various schools of ikebana, ranging from the strictly classical to modern-day approaches, will exhibit arrangements, many of these by East Bay residents. Each afternoon from 2 to 3:30 p.m. teachers from four of these schools, including Mrs. Joan Suzuki of Richmond, teacher in the Sogetsu contemporary school, as well as a professor from the classical Ikenobo School's headquarters in Kyoto, will demonstrate techniques of arranging.

The art of bonseki also will be demonstrated and exhibited. This fine art of sand painting originated in the 13th century with the Zen priests, then spread during the next several centuries to the nobles and warrior class, becoming a necessary qualification for cultured gentlemen.

During the Edo period, the 17th to 19th centuries, it became available to the common people, and then branched out into several schools. There are but a few teachers and practitioners of bonseki in this country, three of these residing in the East Bay.

Each of the three will be demonstrating and exhibiting at the Hana Matsuri festival. Of these, Mrs. Shizuko Kako, who taught as a young girl in Japan, has been familiar with the art for the longest time, more than 40 years. The other two include Mrs. Chiura Obata, widow of Berkeley's late famed brush painter, and Mrs. Kuwako Takahashi of Kensington.

Last August when the Smithsonian Institute, as part of the Bicentennial celebration, wished to present a folk festival of living arts representing varying cultures, Mrs. Takahashi was invited to go to Washington and demonstrate bonseki at the Smithsonian Institute for five days.

The sand painting, usually created only for the occasion, is done on black lacquer trays of different sizes and shapes, manipulating various grades of sand and pebbles with numerous delicate implements — sifters to spread sand, brooms to create mountains, feathers to define waves, a stream, or the outline of a beach, a miniature dropper for spraying dots, a fine brush for birds, and even chopsticks.

Another display will be that of suiseki — special natural stones carefully searched out and collected for indoor enjoyment. Stands are carved to display these. Originally these were called water stones, but now their collection falls into four categories: Landscape stones looking like mountains or waterfalls; figure stones resembling birds, animals, or a statue; pattern stones having patterns like flowers, clouds, butterflies, or some letters, and color stones, those with unusual color and lustre.

As with ikebana and bonseki, suiseki earlier was limited to aristocrats. In the last century it has become popular among all classes.

Among the bonsai will be some miniature bonsai from a "name" collection, the term meaning bean. These are from a collection of some 600 belonging to Mrs. Sandy Planting of the peninsula. None are larger than four inches. Mrs. Planting will discuss the planting and nurture of these each day at 11:30 a.m.

Unusual Japanese table settings will portray the many festivals celebrated in Japan. Among these will be a setting done by Mrs. Kako and Mrs. Takahashi for the "Evening of the Summer Festival." The color scheme of navy blue and white will be carried out in the table cloth and napkins as well as the imari ware. The centerpiece will be a specially created revolving lantern of kimono'd dancers. Another of the tables will be designed by the wives of the officials of the Japanese consulate in San Francisco.

Teacher credential program offered

OAKLAND — Holy Names College announced this week that applications are now being accepted for entry into the fall teaching credential program beginning September 1977. The program consists of 16 units of education classes and 16 units of student teaching combined into Holy Names' unique "Block Program."

Peter Pan Club takes registrants

ALBANY — The Peter Pan Club, a program especially for children in grades one-through five, is accepting registrants for the March activities. Included are plaster of paris sand molds, paper dye, catkins, nature mobiles and weaving using wild grasses and wall memos made out of paper plates and yarn. Cooking will include, "due to popular demand," rice krispie balls, pancakes and the children's favorite, spaghetti.

Trips to the Albany Library, for a story, and Albany Beach are planned, weather permitting. Parent dinner plans are in progress. The children are working on their presentation of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

Salesian nips Albany, Steve Morales stars

By MIKE HALL
I-G Sports Writer

On a football field, Salesian's Steve Morales excels as a do-everything player. On Friday, Albany would like to remind Morales football is over — enough already.

The senior standout has given up his defensive back duties for the kicking duties for the game, but he's still doing everything asked — and then some.

The senior standout has given up his defensive back duties for the kicking duties for the game, but he's still doing everything asked — and then some.

Needless to say, it was too much for Albany to overcome. The Cougars lost their fourth game in as many outings, 3-1.

Morales started things off with a first-inning, two-out single and came around to diamond, the shortstop went three for three at the plate, drove home two runs, scored once himself, made a great throw to catch a Cougar runner at the plate — and just to prove he was human — committed an error.

In the fourth inning, pitcher Mike Knox rapped a one-out single and moved to second another out later when Bud Longmire was hit by a pitch. Albany starter Jon Saunders then threw his sixth wild pitch of the game to advance the runners.

Morales took advantage of the situation by ripping his third single of the game, scoring both teammates.

However, his most important contribution was the seventh-inning throw to the plate.

Albany — which had threatened twice before without capitalizing — looked as if it would finally break the ice. Andrei Wallace led off the frame with a single to left, and after Jerold Wiley struck out, designated hitter John Davis hit a towering drive to the base of the right field fence.

From his third base position, Morales read triple all the way. He, however, ended up receiving Greg Orton's relay throw from right and fired to catcher Michael Curl, who put the tag on Wallace.

"It took a perfect throw, and it was," praised coach John Whitman. Albany ended up scoring its lone run on an RBI single by Mark Diani.

"I thought it was a triple," added Morales. "I threw to home when I heard coach yelling 'four.'"

For Cougar coach Phil Wanlin, who coached Salesian for five years before this season, it was another frustrating afternoon. March 8 Albany stranded 10 runners in a losing effort at Richmond, although Friday's total was only six.

However, it could have been more. After Ken Torres led off the first with a single, Wanlin called a hit and run. With a righthander at the plate, Salesian's Bob Robinson broke for second. Helunged for Raul Ybarra's liner up the middle, made the catch and threw to first to double off Torres.

In the fourth the same thing happened, but from the opposite side. Greg Westphal reached first on an error. With lefty Jay Heeb at the plate, the Cougars went for the hit and run again. This time Morales was waiting for the line drive up the middle to start the double play.

In the sixth the Cougars had the sacks loaded with only one out, but Knox worked out of the jam without allowing a run. "I'm telling the players not to worry, we're getting ready for the league," said Wanlin, a task he doesn't have to worry about until March 22.

Fishing records being set

SACRAMENTO — Any lingering doubts that fishing in California this year is better than ever are being dispelled by the number of record fish being taken in state waters, the Department of Fish and Game noted today.

The DFG has confirmed two recent claims for state record fish: a 27-pound, 4-ounce steelhead and 7-pound, 2-ounce spotted bass.

The record steelhead, which was taken by Robert Halley of Crescent City from the Smith River on Dec. 22, broke a four-year-old record set by Raymond H. Robinson of Fort Dick with a 25-pound, 8-ounce fish, also from the Smith River, on Jan. 20, 1973.

Halley's catch, which measured 40 inches in length and 23 inches in girth, also won a certificate from the Fish and Game Commission as the largest steelhead taken in California during the year.

The commission honors fishermen and hunters for outstanding entries through its fish and wildlife award program, information on which is available from the DFG at 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento 95814.

Holder of the state's spotted bass record is James B. Tatum of Riverside who landed the 21-inch-long fish in Perris Lake, Riverside County, with bait-casting.

Albany Bowl action

Full House upset by 0 & R Vending

By PHIL ALSTON

Not even a 24 point bulge in the standings constitutes anything resembling security in the 915 Major League at Albany Bowl was amply demonstrated in last week's position round where second place 0 & R Vending hammered out a 20 to 5 victory over leading Full House.

The result served to reduce the Full House cushion to nine points and again make a four-team race out of second half competition.

Les Riedlinger's 605 series was a major factor in the Venders' success, but Ray Felix helped things along by inserting a 235 game in the middle of his 587 set.

Joe Allee shot 597 and Wayne Peterson 560 as Nevada Tahoe Tours downed Merry Jax 14-11 in the battle for third. Glenn Kanela had 601 for the losers.

Steve Brewer overcame a dismal 169 start with games of 247 and 230 to post the league's best series of the night at 646 in leading Oaks Card Club 14-11 past Pacers.

The next best was Mike Linck's 643 for Solano Club, but that was wasted in a 19-6 loss to Mario's Marauders. Associated Coin Amusements regained first place in the Majorettes League with a 14-8 decision over Ellis Olson Mortuary in combination with Overdues' 14-8 win, dropping Urban Alternatives to second.

In rolling the league's best series, Patty Oates of Overdues followed much the same pattern as did Steve Brewer in the Majors. After multiple miseries in a 14-6 first game, she came back with a pair of 233 games for 612.

Lupe Leomiti fired 214-598 to pace Wigwagium's 20 to 2 massacre of BCL Superstars. Denise Altman shot 213-576, Nancy Wenger 213-561 and Connie Hill also hit 561.

Larry Glenn's 616 cluster helped Blue Dolphins beat Berkeley Unified Travel 2-1 in the Woodstackers League, but the second place Dolphins lost ground to Berkeley Jet Drive, 3-0 winners over Blue Ribbon Meats.

Phil Niemi, who led the Volney Morrison Memorial loop with 258 game and 643 series, also paced the 870 Commercial with 593 ahead of Gordon Libby's 591 and

Little League sponsorship renewals

ALBANY — Albany merchants and individuals who have not renewed their 1977 Albany Little League sponsorship are "urged to do so as soon as it is convenient, as the league swings into action next month."

Due to additional construction expenses, the league will hold a special new sponsor drive during the month of April, to raise monies to cover the extra expenses, according to league officials.

Sponsors renewing for this month are Ron Hurt, State Farm, Granholt Sheetmetal Works, Bayview Aerie 2323, and Fred and Judith Cabral.

Bob Mann's 579.

Lefty Meehan hit the high notes for Wednesday Scratch Trios with 225 game and 618 series, Elliott Sampson's 605 was best for Saturday Swingers while Jerry Laurella's 596 was enough to nip Jim Reynolds, 223-592, for honors in the 660 Scratch.

Little League's 'Score of Years'

Albany's Little League celebrated its twentieth anniversary this week, and paid tribute to Curt Danner, the only charter member who is still active in league work. Danner, at right, who serves as electrical chairman, and Bill Lewis, league president, display the organization's gold-seal charter commemorating 20 years on the diamond.

Cougars swamp Panthers 94-39 in track opener

ALBANY — Albany High School's track team opened the 1977 season with an impressive performance against arch-rival St. Mary's, Thursday. The Cougars displayed strength in the sprints and the field events in rolling up a 94-39 victory over the Panthers.

Senior Tim Wright led the sprinters winning the 100 (10.3) and the 220 (23.2) as well as the triple jump. He was pushed by sophomore Scott Bryan who came in third in the 100 (10.5), and second in the 220 (24.5).

Robert Zoro impressed with his victories in the 440

(52.3) and 880 as well as the best race of the day in the mile relay. Trailing by more than 45 yards when he received the baton, Bob sped by his opponent to win by more than 20 yards. His 440 time of 52 seconds was according to coach Cruz "one of the more impressive marks of the day."

Albany's weightmen, Tom McDonald, Herb Rounds, and Paul Chavez, swept the shot and the discus in what coach Cruz considered a surprise. McDonald and Rounds proved their value to the team by "volunteering" for duty in the winning mile relay.

Juniors Reggy Maynard (second in 880, first two-mile) provided the needed depth in the distances, while another junior newcomer

Rich Smith came through with a first place in the pole vault.

Easter Seal Tourney

A host of Hollywood stars, major football and other sports figures, and local celebrities have signed up to win the public in the 1977 Bay Area Easter Seal Celebrity Golf Tournament to be held April 1, at Castellow Country Club in Pleasanton.

The fund-raising charity event is being co-sponsored by Bay Area Holiday Inns, Pacific Southwest Airlines and Dollar Rent-A-Car. Net proceeds from the tournament will benefit participating Bay Area Easter Seal Societies.

Sponsors are currently seeking players for the tournament, tee sponsorships and program advertisements are available, and tickets for a wide variety of door prizes are being sold.

and the DFG waits until streams recede before stocking catchable-sized trout in large numbers.

But this year things will be different because of expected low stream flows in May and June, when the DFG says, angling should be highly satisfactory.

Therefore, trout plants in streams will begin just before the April 30 opener and continue regularly until flows become too low and warm for trout survival.

Looking well ahead, the DFG expects that smaller streams may become unsuitable for stocking after the first week of July.

Therefore, most trout scheduled for stream stocking in late July, August and September will now be planted in late April, May, June and early July.

'This is year for trout'

This is the year for trout fishing, says the Department of Fish and Game, because trout stocking will come earlier, what with little runoff and warmer temperatures. This should allow trout fishing much earlier than usual this spring in many northern and central California waters.

The arrangement not only will make more trout available earlier for many anglers, but it will reduce the number of trout in some fisheries where water quality could be a problem later in the year.

Stocking will begin immediately—and at rates heavier than normal—in streams and reservoirs where there is sufficient water, and will continue as long as conditions permit. Most California lakes and reservoirs are open for angling all year.

The DFG noted that some trout lakes will be suitable for fishing through the summer months, while others will be too low and warm to sustain planted trout later in the year.

At the same time, the DFG revealed that reports from the field will be issued regularly to keep anglers informed about which lakes are involved in the accelerated stocking program as well as specifying the relative, small number which cannot be planted because of low water conditions.

Normally, spring snow melt results in northern and central California stream flows that are too high and too cold for good angling,

a 70-foot, double-grooved stone starting line for runners extends across arena.

UC team digs up evidence of 'unreported' Greek battle

An ancient Greek battle never mentioned before by historians has been reported for the first time at the University of California in Berkeley.

The clash, in the late fifth century B.C., is believed to have destroyed the original temple and Panhellenic games center at Nemea, according to Stephen G. Miller, director of the U.C. archaeological project there.

The incident may have been omitted from ancient accounts for reasons of propriety and politics, Miller said.

Fighting at the sanctuary of Nemean Zeus violated a religious taboo against violence in a sacred place. And writers of that era may have avoided offending the nearby city-state of Argos, which possibly attacked to take over the profitable and prestigious biennial athletic and religious festival.

"Historians whose works are known failed to mention the battle, and this might have been because they were not proud of the incident," Miller said.

"Euripides' play 'Hypsipyle' about the Nemean games, first staged around 408 B.C., popularized the myth that Argos founded the event. The play doesn't mention the violence, quite possibly because the playwright wanted to justify the recent takeover by Argos."

Control of the games alternated several times between Argos and neighboring Kleonai during the festival's 800-year history.

In his third annual lecture last night reporting on the Nemea excavations, Miller said that Argos' bloody takeover of the games during the Peloponnesian War was one of two possible explanations for the evidence of violence.

Another less likely reason might have been the Spartans marching through Nemea in 388 B.C. on their way to defeat Argos. The historian Xenophon mentioned that battle, but didn't say where it was.

Whoever was fighting, Miller believes this violence destroyed the original temple and adjacent stadium.

The later temple with three columns still standing today was built in 325 B.C., but was largely destroyed by earthquake around 370 A.D. The new stadium, hollowed out of a hill about a quarter-mile distant, has been extensively unearthed by the U.C. excavations.

Bronze arrow heads, iron spear points, and burnt limestone fragments clearly showed violence and destruction in the sanctuary area, Miller said. They were found about five feet below the present ground level and were dated by associated pottery fragments with characteristic styles for that period.

A tantalizing hint of a connection between Nemea and the games at Olympia was suggested by several bronze fragments in olive leaf form that were unearthed.

The olive leaves probably adorned a sculpture of some hero, Miller said. This might have been an athlete who had won honors at Olympia, since the olive wreath was the distinctive reward for the Olympic games. The prize at Nemea was a crown of wild celery.

The leaves and many other small bronze fragments were found around a pair of stone platforms unearthed next to the temple. The bases could be exposed only after seven drums from fallen columns were carefully lifted and set aside with a tractor.

In the stadium, the Berkeley team uncovered a unique feature that has not been found at Olympia or any of the other athletic arenas excavated in Greece, Miller said.

This is a turning marker stone on the stadium floor where runners in the longer races doubled back for added distance. It is a square block, embedded to the stadium floor level, with a square hole in the center to hold a marker.

Measuring stones along the side of the stadium marking the race courses are other unusual finds uncovered this year. The foundation for the judges' stand was also located.

About one-fourth of the race track has been exposed, partly with the help of a bulldozer.

The entire 70-foot, double-grooved stone starting line has been uncovered at the closed end of the horseshoe-shaped stadium. The water supply system and much of the ground-level drinking water channel, surrounding the stadium floor have also been cleared.

Miller, associate professor of classics at Berkeley, and his archaeological wife, Stella Grobel Miller, headed a team of 11 from Berkeley that worked with local laborers during three months of digging at Nemea this spring.

This was their third annual excavation season, with at least two more scheduled for 1978.

Nemea, some 80 miles southwest of Athens, was one of four Panhellenic games centers. The others were at Olympia, Isthmia, and Delphi.

The Nemea excavations are supported entirely by non-state money. The 1976 season was funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, matched by contributions by individuals and foundations, including the U.C. Berkeley Foundation.

'Art, Craft Fashion' exhibit set

ALBANY — On Friday evening the Albany P.T.A. Council and Albany Adult School will co-sponsor an annual "Art, Craft and Fashion Exhibit." Some 30 teachers and their students are participating.

Starting at 7 p.m., painting, ceramics, sculptures, rugs, quilts, upholstery and other art projects will be on display in the Albany High School Little Theatre lobby at 603 Key Route Blvd.

Woodcarving, Ikebana, potters wheel and wood refinishing demonstrations will precede an 8 p.m. fashion show. A multi-media slide presentation on the Albany Unified School District's adult education program will also be shown.

Admission is $1 with proceeds going towards a children's benefit fund. Free refreshments will be served and door prizes awarded.

Seniors given new tax breaks

SAN FRANCISCO — Two new, liberalized tax breaks are in store for taxpayers 65 years of age and older, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

The new tax law has made it much easier for the elderly to take a credit against the tax they owe. It also allows them to keep a larger share of any profit from the sale of their home.

For those preparing 1976 returns a new "tax credit for the elderly" has replaced the much more complicated retirement income credit available on past years' returns. To claim it, taxpayers no longer have to have retirement income. Also, the requirement for having at least $600 in annual earnings for each of ten years prior to claiming the credit has been eliminated.

Under the new credit single persons can subtract from their taxes 15 percent of all their taxable income up to $2,500. This same credit is also available to married couples filing jointly if only one spouse is 65 or older. For couples filing a joint return with both 65 or older, the amount subject to the credit is $3,750. This provides for a maximum credit of $375 or $750 depending on the taxpayer's filing status.

However, the amount the taxpayer multiplies by 15 percent must be reduced by each dollar they receive for social security and other nontaxable pensions. It must also be reduced by one-half of the adjusted gross income reported on the tax return that is over $7,500 for single taxpayers and $10,000 for those filing a joint return.

Another tax break that persons 65 or older get is on the sale of their home if sold on or after Jan. 1, 1977. Previous to this date if the adjusted sales price was $20,000 or less any profit was tax free. After Jan. 1, the $20,000 figure is increased to $35,000. If the selling price is over $35,000, the tax break is pro-rated.

Pet owners are warned on rabies

MORAGA — The California Veterinary Medical Association (CVMA), has again issued a warning to pet owners on the possible dangers of rabies in California.

Reports have indicated that there are more and more cases of rabid bats, skunks and other wild animals in certain districts of California. Due to the drought wild animals, who are usually shy, will come closer to populated areas to find food and water.

"While there is no immediate threat of a full scale rabies outbreak, we continue to get reports of animal bites and possible death to children and adults from rabies," a CVMA spokesman said. "Rabies, when untreated, means certain death to those who have been bitten. Due to an extended national program, the reports of deaths from this disease have been reduced in recent years. Still, many pet owners do not protect their animals, or their families, from the threat of this disease by having rabies inoculations."

'What's in a name' poses no problem for EBRPD directors

OAKLAND — Attention map-makers and all those intrigued by how permanent names are tagged on to prominent lands!

Directors of the East Bay Regional Park District on March 8 officially adopted legal designations for four widely-scattered parklands after assurance that the preferences of historical, personal and other park-naming interests had been thoroughly sounded and weighed.

The board actions came on recommendation of EBRPD's volunteer Park Advisory Committee and the PAC's subcommittee for "names-on-the-lands," headed by David S. Way of Oakland and backed by members Philip Holmes of Fremont and Gretchen Sperber of Berkeley.

From now on: San Leandro Shoreline, the 194-acre Oakland Scavenger Co. sanitary land fill at the foot of Davis Street in San Leandro, will now be referred to as the proposed Oyster Bay Regional Shoreline.

Camp Parks, the 451-acre rolling lands in the Dublin-Pleasanton area, is now Tassajara Creek Regional Land Bank, an entirely new designation.

Brooks Island, the tiny park-patch in Richmond's inner harbor, will keep its "unofficial" designation, Brooks Island Regional Preserve.

The new park on the waterfront off downtown Martinez being jointly developed by the city and the park district will drop its "middle name" — waterfront — and become Martinez Regional Shoreline.

The greatest public interest focused on Brooks Island and the San Leandro shoreline, Way said.

Way's committee reported that three other names were the heaviest competitors with "Brooks Island" for that official designation. These included "Chochenyo," suggested as a commemorative recognition of the American Indians who used the island, and "Isle de Carmen," the name which appeared on the original Spanish map of the San Francisco Bay Area in 1776.

"There is no record of why 'Isle de Carmen' was used, and other than that original map, it was not used again," Way reported. He added that there is no record of Spanish use or artifacts from the Spanish on the island.

The third, "Sheep Island," derives from limited local usage of the name, arising from grazing operations there in the past and dating back to an unofficial map produced in 1856, according to Way.

The PAC leader noted that the official naming of the dump lands on San Leandro Shoreline as Oyster Bay Regional Shoreline was speeded up to help avoid the confusion that is already abroad between those lands and the extensive 601-acre EBRPD development of San Leandro Bay Regional Shoreline, Oakland. This development is now under way. The Scavenger Co. has not yet officially given the "Oyster Bay" lands to the park district.

That name derives from the importance of oysters to that area in the past and the expectations that, given an improved habitat throughout San Francisco Bay waters, the oysters may reappear, Way said.

Other alternatives included "Oyster Landing Regional Shoreline" and "Shorebird Park Regional Shoreline," he said. The PAC leader pointed out that although there was some opposition to the "oyster" connotation because of a possible confusion with Oyster Point, situated on the San Francisco side of the Bay, the preference of San Leandro area residents and homeowner groups participating in the park's creation prevailed.

"Tassajara Creek" won out over "Tassajara Hills" and "Camp Parks" in that naming procedure, since the creek portion is considered an important part of the park experience, Way said.

In December, EBRPD acquired choice, wooded lands along the creek, on Tassajara Road, which are being developed into an entrance and parking area, preliminary to opening up of the parklands this summer.

As for the Martinez designation, Way's committee pointed out that that name, dropping "waterfront," was considered by the joint city-park district committee, including input by citizens, and that it is used in the legal agreements for "the establishment, development, maintenance and operation of both a Regional Shoreline and a City Park along the waterfront."
